KIMBERLÉ CRENSHAW

WED, APRIL 25TH, 6 PM • CAMPBELL HALL

Heightening tensions in the US over police killings of Black people have undermined confidence that the election of Barack Obama signaled a new era on race relations in the US. The more lasting legacy may be the one championed by late Justice Scalia whose legal philosophy currently underwrites the central tensions in equality law in the United States. Through a Critical Race Theory prism, Professor Crenshaw will discuss Black Lives Matter and SAY HER NAME as challenges to contemporary jurisprudence on race, and assess the new openings presented by current events. Co-sponsored by the Consortium for Black Studies in California.

Living Lives of Resilient Love IN A TIME OF HATE

In the Fall of 2016, UCSB's Division of Student Affairs launched the Resilient Love series in order to ask how we might respond ethically and honorably to hate and violence. The series features visiting artists and academics as it seeks to promote conversation and creative work that will forge a love-driven response to hate, hurt, and fear. Students, staff, faculty and community members are welcome to join.
